THE SGD AWARDS 2017

It's time to organise your entries for this year's awards – this time it could be you!

THE SGD AWARDS 2017 is now open for entries. Eligible designers are welcome to submit applications in 17 diverse categories, from tiny residential gardens to large public spaces, and everything in between. A shortlist of finalists will be announced in autumn, and the winners will be revealed at the ceremony on 2 February 2018. Having worked hard to get the Awards into a viable position, the SGD is now delighted to able to reduce the entry fees and make them even more accessible to Members. For more information on each category and to enter, go to www.sgdlawards.com

WHY ENTER?

"SGD Members have so much talent and the awards are the best chance to show the world what you are up to. We are keen to see every type of garden and project, however small or quirky, so don't hold back. Keep your entry concise and include the best images you can, especially photographs. The judges need to be able to see how the garden has changed and the impacts and benefits your work has brought to both places and people. We look forward to seeing your submissions later this year."

RICHARD SNEESBY,
Awards judge

"Entering the awards was a first for me and I'm really pleased I did. The entry process is straightforward, but make sure you label everything in a coherent manner. Take good-quality images showing interesting and varying perspectives, and detailed shots too. The Award Ceremony was a truly memorable night. To have your design skills recognised by such an august body, and to be in the company of so many designers you admire, is an honour. I would encourage designers to enter. It widens your audience and is a boost to business – I've already begun work on a new commission as a direct result of the client reading about the award, and have another one lined up."
